German And Bulgarian Armies Strongly Established In Rumania

LONDON, SEPT. 9.—Russian forces fighting with the Rumanians have forced a passage of the Danube and have invaded Serbia on the northeastern corner, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Athens today.

The Russians are reported to be advancing towards the Orient railway, (the line that runs from Berlin to Constantinople), having already occupied the Serbian town of Negotin.

Negotin is seven miles inside the Serbian frontier.

The Greek garrison of Verria, an important fortress west of Saloniki, has joined the revolutionary movement and declared its intention of joining the allies.

Gains for the Russians east of Halicz in the Carpathians were admitted in the following official statement, dated September 6, and made public by the Vienna war office today:

"Russian front—Army group of Archduke Karl: In the Carpathians after violent attacks lasting all day the Russians gained small advantages. Other attempts to conquer ground failed. East of Halicz there has been bitter fighting. After several storm attacks the enemy pressed back this part of our line."

OLD 5-CENT LOAF MAY GO THIS WINTER

National Master Bakers Urge A Standardized 10-cent Loaf

MANY CITIES JUMP FROM 5 TO 6 CENTS

Local Bakers Hesitate To Raise On Account Of Outside Competition

What will local bakers do to meet the increase in baking costs?

At a meeting of the National Association of Master Bakers in Chicago Friday, every baker in the United States is urged to abandon the 5-cent loaf and standardize the 10-cent loaf. The action is just a recommendation, and is not compulsory even among the members of the association. It is also urged that where "local conditions make it necessary to maintain the small loaf, prices be adjusted consistent with the cost of manufacture."

The advance from 5 to 6 cents has been put into effect in many Ohio cities, but has left Coshocton with 5-cent bread because, according to one local baker, "We dont work together, and all Coshocton merchants wait for someone else to take the initiative in raising prices." He said, however, as soon as the price of [illegible] bread is advanced—and this may be the outgrowth of the Chicago conference—local bakers will advance their prices.

Selling at 4 Cents

Some grocers are selling bread at even 4 cents here, because one baker does not replace stale with fresh bread and can put his bread on the grocers shelves for slightly less than 4 cents. It is conceded, among local bakers, that there is little profit in bread and that they count upon pastry to make

THE WEATHER

FOR OHIO—Sunday fair; slightly warmer.

(The following clever poem by Holmes is printed by request. It is not only appropriate at this time of year, but well illustrates the technical skill and subliety of thot of this great master of English.—Editor's note.)

TO AN INSECT

I love to hear thine earnest voice,
Wherever thou are hid,
Thou testy little dogmatist,
Thou pretty Katydid!
Thou mindest me of gentlefolks—
Old gentlefolks are they—
Thou say'st an undisputed thing
In such a solemn way.

Oh, tell me where did Katy live,
And what did Katy do?
And was she very fair and young,
And yet so wicked, too?
Did Katy love a naughty man,
Or kiss more cheeks than one?
I warrant Katy did no more
Than many a Kate has done.

Dear me! I'll tell you all about
My fuss with little Jane,
And Ann, with whom I used to walk
So often down the lane,
And all that tore their locks of black,
Or wet their eyes of blue—
Pray tell me, sweetest Katydid,
What did poor Katy do?

Ah no! the living oak shall crash,
That stood for ages still:
The rock shall rend its mossy base
And thunder down the hill,
Before the little Katydid
Shall add one word, to tell
The mystic story of the maid
Whose name she knows so well.

Peace to the ever-murmuring race!
And when the latest one
Shall fold in death her feeble wings
Beneath the autumn sun,
Then shall she raise her fainting voice,
And lift her drooping lid,
And then the child of future years
Shall hear what Katydid.

Chauffeur And Rankin Held Up In Deep Cut Near Martin's Ferry

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, OHIO, SEPT. 9. The two foreigners who murdered Superintendent Lee Rankin while he was carrying $12,000 pay to the miners near Martins Ferry today, will probably be lynched if they are caught.

Several hundred miners armed with shotguns and rifles are after them, and will show them no mercy if they get them before the officers.

The bandits have escaped into the hills and posses have also been organized across the river in West Virginia to catch them if they try to cross over. In Rankin's pocket was found $1000, which the robbers overlooked.

Four groups of bloodhounds are on the trail of the slayers, and it was reported at midnight that the bandits were being surrounded. The trail was said to be easy for the dogs to follow, and the capture of the men is confidently predicted.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, OHIO, SEPT. 9. —Two bandits today held up and murdered Lee Rankin, superintendent of the Florence mine of the Youghiogheny Coal Co., while he was on his way to pay his miners. They escaped with $12,000. Rankin was shot and died at the Martins Ferry hospital.

GOMPERS ARRIVE TO MANAGES THE STRIKE

NEW YORK, SEPT. 9.—Opinion as to a hurried settlement of the strike of the Interboro railways was divided here tonight. Officials of the rapid transit system believe the strike cannot long endure, as there is discontent among the men who obeyed Organizer Fitzgerald's strike order, and rumors of returning to work are persistent.

Among the employes, there is a decided difference; some are now willing to return to work, but the arrival of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, may change the situation and make the transit officials less confident of an early settlement.

The disturbances that marked Friday's strike were no continued Saturday. It was apparent that the men knew of Gompers' coming to have charge of the fight. Gompers said he will immediately assume active charge of the strike and try to direct it without further disturbance.

Electric Restaurants.

A large mining company has installed an electric restaurant 150 yards in from the foot of the shaft in one of its mines. Here food is cooked or heated electrically, and hot coffee is prepared by the same means. Since most of the important coal mines already use electric power underground for power purposes, there should be little difficulty in establishing subterranean electric restaurants in any of them.

The man who probably will start this afternoon's game is a Coshocton professional man who will not make his identity known until the game begins. He is a southpaw and is said to have plenty of speed and curve. If he can hold up under the Independents' batting ability, he may finish the game, but the Feds are anxious to defeat the Independents and Hook may be put in the box if Mr. Blank, whose name begins with A, allows too many hits.

Manager Otto Bries said he expects a good crowd as the Independents are rated as one of the best amateur teams in the state.

Base Ball Dope In Broken Lots

After a season of climbing up and falling back in the American league standing, the Detroit Tigers are very much in the pennant hunt at the present time.

None of the half-dozen pennant contenders in the American league race is putting up a stronger game than the Jennings outfit, and none appears to have a better chance to cop the flag.

With the marvelous Ty Cobb displaying old time form, the entire Tiger crew are up on their toes and going after everything in sight.

The Detroit club is one of the pioneers of the American league, having been a member since the circuit was formed in 1900.

The Tigers' great fight last season, when they finished only 2[illegible] points behind the champion Red Sox, shows that Hughey's boys carry the punch and will bear watching.

Three years in succession the Tigers took part in world's series games, but on each occasion they failed to land. However, the team holds the distinction of being the only one in the league to win three pennants in a row.

During the sixteen years Detroit has been in the American league its team has never ended a season in last place. In fact, the cellar has never been occupied by the Tigers for any great length of time during any playing season.

American league records show that the Tigers have finished the season eight times in the first division and an equal number of times in the second division.

It looks now as if Manager Jennings guessed right when he grabbed "Hack" Spencer. The old St. Louis-Boston backstop is doing grand work for the Tigers after his absence of several years from the big show.

The veteran Sam Crawford has taken part in the fray regularly of late and is doing his share to land the big prize for the Jennings outfit.

In Burns, Young, Bush and Vitt, Manager Jennings has developed a young and speedy infield that stands second to none in baseball.

What makes the pennant chances of the Tigers appear particularly bright is the fact they are getting real pitching along with the team's brilliant batting. This winning combination is one that has not usually been enjoyed by the Detroit battlers.

Two Tiger pitchers, Coveleskie and Mitchell, both of whom are now pitching the gilt-edged variety, were supposed to be thru in the big show before they joined Detroit. Coveleskie has been released by the Phillies and Mitchell had been given the gate by Cleveland.

Next to the league pennant race the most interest in the playing of the Tigers is centered in Ty Cobb's effort to overtake Tris Speaker for the lead in American league batting.

Before taking change of the Detroit team in 1907, Hughey Jennings had been a star pastimer for 13 years. In the early days he was known as the king of shortstops. As a member of the Baltimore team in 1895 he accepted 21 chances without an error in a 14-inning game against Boston.

GOOD NEWS for STUTTERERS

Speech Troubles Now Ended By a Simple Method Discovered by a Farmer's Son

AFTER stuttering and stammering for twenty years, Benj. N. Bogue, son of an Indiana farmer, discovered and perfected a simple method by which he quickly cured himself. His speech troubles ended and he never stammered or stuttered again. One of those who knew Mr. Bogue in the days he stuttered so badly was Hon. Hervey D. Vories, formerly Indiana Superintendent of Public Instruction. The cure was so marvelous that Mr. Vories suggested that the greatest life service Mr. Bogue could render was to help others afflicted as he had been.

It is the one delight of Mr. Bogue's life to tell stammerers and stutterers how they too can be cured. He is willing to help any one who has suffered the embarrassment and knows the handicaps of the stammerer. An announcement like this one is the only way he has of quickly reaching large numbers of those afflicted with stammering, and he has taken this method to reach stammerers everywhere.

Mr. Bogue requests that you send him no money—just enclose a stamp in your letter if you wish, for the letter he will write you. State in your letter, your age and how long you have been afflicted with speech troubles. If you do not stammer, you will be doing anyone a favor who has this awful affliction, if you will mail his or her name and address to Mr. Bogue. It costs you nothing and you will be under no obligations.

Mr. Bogue gladly writes promptly to anyone afflicted with stammering or stuttering and sends them full information as to how they can be quickly and permanently cured. Address Benj. N. Bogue, 1175 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Miss Billie De Krujff, of The Ohio Service Company has received word that her brother, Theodore A. De Krujff, a member of the Curtiss Aviation School, at Buffalo, was injured several days ago at the Curtiss Aviation field. Mr. De Krujff, with an instructor, Major Campbell, was making a flight from the field, when from some cause which has not been stated, he fell to the ground, a distance of 500 feet. No bones were broken in the fall, but the aviator received severe bruises and lacerations.

Miss De Krujff is in communication with authorities at Buffalo, and it is not thot that it will be necessary for her to go to her brother.

FREE STREET FAIR AT NEWCOMERSTOWN

An old-fashioned Street Fair will be held at Newcomerstown, Sept. 11to 16, in honor of the dedication of the new three-story Knights of Pythias building which will be held on Thursday. Among the bands secured for this occasion are the Byesville Ladies' band and the Boy Scout band of Newcomerstown.

Arrangements have been made for many free street attractions and daily balloon ascensions, in addition to all the regular carnival features necessary to the success of events of this kind.

Hundreds of dollars have been offered in prizes by the merchants of the town, and the affair bids fair to eclipse the home-coming held two years ago. Parades are announced for three days. Thursday will be K. of P. Day; Friday will be the day for best decorated automobiles and business floats and a comic parade, and Saturday will be given over to the farmers for the stock parade.

Every day will be a big one, lasting from dawn until late at night.

First Real British Census.

The first real census of Great Britain and Ireland was taken in 1801, when the population of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland was found to be 15,717,287. Food prices were then regulated by parliamentary enactment and "forestallers," or speculators in provisions, were severely punished by imprisonment. After the close of the Waterloo campaign prices receded to almost former rates and the British people were again happy.

Good Health Recipe.

Asked once to what he attributed his remarkable health and youthful appearance, the late Lord Alverstone, British ex-lord chief justice, who died at the age of seventy-three, replied, "Early to bed, early to rise, and proper physical exercise."

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink Glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

He was on his way to the mine near Martin Ferry in a taxi cab driven by Oliver Pickens. While passing a cut in the road two foreigners jumped out, poked a gun in his face and demanded his money. Rankin escaped from the machine, and while attempting to escape was shot in the back and an artery severed.

It was found later that four bullets were fired into his body.

Five automobiles loaded with police started out from Martin Ferry after the bandits, who escaped over the hills and into the woods. Sheriff Bailey of Belmont county sent for bloodhounds, which will take up the trail this afternoon.

Rankin was city treasurer of Martins Ferry and a member of the Republican county committee.

Pickens Describes Murder.

The following account of robbery was given by Oliver Pickens, Rankin's chauffeur:

"We were going thru a deep cut just west of Martins Ferry when two men stepped into the road. They flourished guns and ordered us to halt.

"I threw on the brakes. Before the car came to a stop Rankin grabbed the money and dashed for the wood beside the road.

"One of the men gave an order in a foreign tongue. He kept me covered while the other turned and shot several times at Rankin.

"Rankin fell just at the edge of the wood. The men grabbed the money he carried and rushed away into the wood."

Pickens' story is confirmed by Mrs. Earl Brown, who was near the scene of the murder in a buggy.

Make Their Escape.

Homer Kline of this city knew Rankin well, having worked for the same company.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., SEPT. 9.—Gifts aggregating $40,000 were received in this city today from Mrs Russell Sage. Mrs. Sage is celebrating her eighty-eighth birthday. She was born in this city and it has been her custom for several years to remember Syracuse institutions on her birthday.

Syracuse University received $25,000 and gifts of $5,000 each are made to three other institutions.

Christened With Human Blood.

Not always was a bottle of wine used in christening a ship. In the days of sacrifice to the gods, it is said, it was customary to sacrifice a human being when a boat was being launched and to cut his throat over the prow, so that his blood baptized it.

following dispatch transmitted by the Rome Wireless Press Service today:

"Italian newspapers are discussing the possibility of shortening the German front which shows the gravity of their situation. It is believed this is intended to prepare the German public for the evacuation of France and Belgium."

In a fierce hand-to-hand combat the British captured another trench from the Germans in the sector of Hightwood (Foreaux forest) says the official report issued by the war office today. Heavy casualties were inflicted upon the Germans.

German batteries were active and heavy bombardment was carried out against certain British position.

The official report follows: "Last night there was sharp hand to hand fighting at Highwood, where we captured a German trench. Two officers and 19 Bavarians of the rank and file were made prisoners and we inflicted heavy casualties upon the enemy."

A wood east of Belloy-en-Santerre at southern end of the Somme front was captured by the French in attack last night and further progress was also made in the German trenches in the sector of Deniecourt, southwest of Belloy.

RUMANIA IS INVADED.

BERLIN, SEPT. 9.—German war correspondents on the Bulgarian front reported today that the German and Bulgarian armies have penetrated 50 miles into the Rumanian province of Dobrudja.

The Overseas News Agency in commenting on the situation says: "The fact that Bulgarian troops defeated the Russians in Rumania destroys the legend that Bulgars would not fight against Russians because both are Slavs."

OLD FIVE CENT

ing."

Only one of the five Coshocton bakers is a member of the National Association of Master Bakers.

One baker said it would be impossible to cut the size of the five-cent loaf, as it already had been cut almost to the limit. It is not thot the small loaf will be abandoned here.

Marion, Zanesville and Springfield have been among the last cities to raise the price of the small loaf and cut down the 10-cent loaf.

Competition Is Keen

"The chief reason why we have not raised prices," said one local baker, "is on account of the foreign bread. Many local grocers get foreign bread, which can be shipped and still allow foreign bakers more profit than we get. This is because they exchange no stale bread; whatever is left on the grocers' hands is their loss. Then they have bigger establishments and naturally with more machinery and system can manufacture bread at a lower cost. It costs us about 3 1-2 cents a loaf."

At the conference it was decided not to lower the quality of bread. By obtaining the cheapest materials bakers could secure a reasonable profit, but it was decided better to raise prices or abandon the small loaf.

Materials Are High

Here are advances in baking materials in the last two years:

Patent flour, 100 per cent; rye, 124 per cent; sugar, 66 per cent; shortening, 60 per cent; milk, 40 per cent; salt, 14 per cent; wrapping paper, 70 per cent.

Opening Date Is Two Days Later

Manager Hick of the Sixth Street Theatre has good news for Coshocton people who work on Saturday night as he has made arrangements to open the theatre on Monday night, Sept 18th instead of Saturday as first announced, with the big musical show "Step Lively." The show was originally billed at the Auditorium, Newark for Monday the 18th, but on account of so many people not being able to attend Saturday shows in Coshocton the management made arrangements with the Newark house to trade dates. "Step Lively" has 35 people, plenty of beautiful girls, great comedians, and a carload of special scenery. Plan now to attend the opening of the Sixth Street Theatre.

Maybe There Is Big Money In It

Farmer up in Morgan county, Indiana, had a worthless hill. Found out it was a superior quality of blue clay. Now they're cutting it down and shipping it away by the car load to be used in the manufacture of pottery. That hill was worth more than all the rest of the farm.

Man down in Connecticut had a worn out piece of land. Couldn't even give it away. But it would grow trees. Son studied forestry and went to work in the right way. Woodland now increasing in value every year, and worth more than good corn land.

Limestone ledges, phosphorus rocks, quarries, swamps—all have their value. Even the gravel beds and the sand pits, according to the U. S. geological survey, yielded $23,121,617 during the last year.

So it goes. Do not be discouraged if you have a piece of bad land. It may be worth something, some day. There is mighty little waste in the economy of Nature.—Farm Life.

WHAT MR. HUGHES HAS LEARNED

That Prohibition is an issue of tremendous interest to a large portion of the American people is a fact that the West has made plain to Charles E. Hughes on his recent speaking tour. In Utah, Wyoming and Montana the people have not been backward in advising the Republican standard bearer what they expect of one or the other major parties on this issue.

Mr. Hughes has fairly intimate knowledge of politics that in the East. We doubt if he had sensed the desires of the West before his recent visit there. He now knows that both Prohibition and woman's suffrage are dear to the western heart. He has seen, first hand, that the West and South are together on the Prohibition issue; that the West has its mind made up on equal suffrage; and that both West and South are seething with issues that the reactionary East has so far ignored.

Even the liquor interests are more alive to present day social and political tendencies than the complacent highbrows of the East. These interests entertain no delusions as to what is coming. They sense certain radical changes and are preparing to meet them. As an example of this it may be cited that a St. Louis brewing concern, one of the largest in the world, is preparing and will soon put on the market a genuine "soft drink."

It has long been a favorite trick of politicians to forestall the people in the making of political issues. But they can only forestall. They can never permanently divert the minds of the whole people on a vital issue, such as temperance or votes for women. Both are coming and none recognize it so quickly as those men and interests who will be adversely affected by the change.

Mr. Hughes is an intelligent man. And whether or not he is elected president, he will at least return East with his views radically modified by what he has seen and heard in the "Wooly West." There are issues now launched there that the politicians will have to figure on in a national way not later than 1920.

THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA

In his address to the suffragists at Atlantic City the other day President Wilson stated a truth which has not yet received general recognition. He said in substance that in the past only a lawyer knew enough to run this country, but that now our problems have so changed that it is not legal, but social and economic knowledge that is most needed.

Ours was the first real experiment in popular government. We had no precedents to turn to. Even the forms had to be created. And great legal acumen was needed to give form and scope to our new constitution, our new systems, our new ideas of political and civil rights and obligations.

It took the Civil war in addition to the lawyer's skill to round our new political institutions into the form which is now fixed and definite. But at last we are proceeding on the way in a more orderly manner. The forms have been builded and the foundation cement of our national structure has been poured and is hardening. Our days of legal experimentation are in the past.

But the new problems are no less vital, no less perplexing than the old. Now it is the woman's touch that is needed quite as much as the man's. In truth, the problems of government are today five-sixths the daily problems of womankind.

They are problems which involve clean food supplies, adequate water and sewer facilities, sanitary streets, the safe guarding of the buying public from the manufacturer and vendor of spurious goods, the regulation of the hours of child labor, schools that advance with a changing civilization and a long list of other issues that are directly the problems of the home, rather than of the store or farm or office.

There is nothing strange, as some people try to make themselves believe, about the rising demand for votes for women. It is as natural a development as was the demand a century ago for universal manhood suffrage [illegible] visionary as was that demand a hundred years ago.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

STANDS BY THE WIDOWS

Editor The Tribune:

I hope you will feel interested enough in the poor old widows in your county to publish the following notice in your good paper in conspicuous position. Congress adjourned today but I am remaining here for no other purpose but to help these women get their pension as quickly as possible.

WILLIAM A. ASHBROOK.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SOLDIER'S WIDOWS

Washington, D. C.
September, 8, 1916.

President Wilson today signed the Ashbrook Widow's Pension Bill, and it is now the law of the land. It benefits Civil and Mexican War widows only. Widows now on the pension roll or who may hereafter be placed thereon under the provisions of this Bill who are seventy years of age are entitled to $20 per month. It raises the marriage limitations fifteen years or to June 27th, 1915, and restores to remarried widows their former pensionable status. Therefore if you married a soldier before June 27th, 1905 you are entitled to $12 if under seventy and $20 if over 70. I expect to remain in Washington some days to look after these claims. All beneficiaries should write to me at once for information and blanks, giving your husband's name, company and regiment. Pension agents and attorneys are prohibited from charging a fee for those who are now on the pension rolls but may charge $10 for original claims. If you have an original claim and you employ an attorney don't send to Washington but go to your local attorney or pension agent. With the help of your Congressman he can do better for you than a stranger. I am remaining here solely to help you and will be glad to have you promptly advise me as to your case.

Very respectfully,
William A. Ashbrook, M. C.

NOTABLE BIRTHDAYS TODAY
September 10.

James Linn Rodgers, American consul-general at Mexico City, who is acting as advisor of the United States commissioners at the conference of Mexican and American representatives now in progress at Portsmouth, is 55 years old today. Stationed at Mexico City thruout the "last unpleasantness," Mr. Rodgers has maintained the dignity of his country thru rather trying times, and in his thoro knowledge of popular opinion and past and present conditions in the southern republic, is probably not equaled by any of his countrymen. He is a native of Columbus, O., a graduate of Ohio State University, and began his career as a newspaper man in Columbus. Then he served four years as private secretary of the Governor of the State, and his experience gave him a clear insight into politics and the motives of average men. Later he served on important state commissions. He began his consular service in 1905 as consul-general to Shanghai, China. Two years later he went to Havana in the same capacity, serving there till called by President Wilson to his present post, which is that of special agent of the United States state department in the absence of regular diplomatic officials, and practically amounts to the role of ambassador.

All to the Good.

He was suddenly somewhat smitten by a recognition of some good quality in the woman. Perhaps, after all, he had been a bit hard upon her. So, with a touch of repentence, he said: "She wouldn't be so bad—if she had any education and some breeding—and was better looking—and knew how to dress at all." It is, of course, these little touches that count.

Returns Next Week.

Irvine Anderson, who has been employed at Mechanicksville, New York, during the summer months, will return to Coshocton next week for a short visit at his home on South Fourth street before leaving for Columbus, where he is a senior at Ohio State University.

Mr. Anderson has been at Saratoga Springs during the past week representing the Ohio State University chapter of Beta Theta Pi fraternity at their national convention. Before coming to Coshocton he will spend a few days in Elizabethtown, New York, as the guest of a school friend, Glenn Skiles.

Attends Indiana School.

Miss Margaret Gray, of Cambridge street, leaves September 19 for Indianapolis where she will attend Tudor Hall, a school for girls.

District 3 Elects.

At the called meeting of District 3 of Grace M. E. church, at the home of Mrs. Edmund Strasser, of South Seventh street, Saturday evening, these new officers were elected:

President, Mrs. Edward Hunter.

First vice president, Mrs. Harold Hershman.

Second vice president, Mrs. John Almack.

Secretary, Mrs. Edmund Strasser.

Treasurer, Mrs. Ella Williams.

Flower secretary, Mrs. Guy Hedge.

Takes Hospital Training.

Miss Leone Raymer, of Chestnut street, has gone to Cleveland, where she will take a course in nurse's training in a Cleveland hospital.

Here For Visit.

Mrs. George Bordenkircher and her daughter, Marie, who have been in Cleveland for the past three months, came to Coshocton Saturday for a visit of one week at their home. Miss Bordenkircher is under the care of a specialist in Cleveland for her health, and her condition is improving rapidly. They will return to Cleveland to continue the treatment.

An Explanation.

Thru a misunderstanding the report of two district meetings of the W. R. C. which were held Friday evening were confused. At the regular meeting which was held at the close of the memorial service arrangements were made for serving refreshments at each monthly meeting. No refreshments were served at the conclusion of the memorial service as was erroneously stated.

On Route Six.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Shearn, of Mt. Vernon, Miss Jessie Shearn, of Ashland, Michigan, and Miss Bernice Fible, of Coshocton, are spending the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Harris, of Coshocton, Route 6.

Take Motor Trip.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Kitsmiller and Mr. and Mrs. Verle Kitsmiller will leave Sunday for a motor trip to Columbus and Cincinnati. Mr. and Mrs. Verle Kitsmiller will resume their studies at Eclectic Medical college at Cincinnati.

During Dr. Kitsmiller's absence his practice will be in charge of Dr. Ross Reeds.

Big Barbecue At Fresno.

An enjoyable event at Fresno Saturday evening was a barbecue at the river which was participated in by all of the young people of the village.

WOMAN SO WEAK COULD NOT SLEEP

Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Oxford, Mass.—"I had lost three children and I was all run down and so weak I could not sleep at night. My eyesight would leave me and everything I ate upset my stomach. I was very nervous and if I would start to sweep I would have to stop and lie down before I could finish. I was looking over the paper one day and read of a woman who felt as I did and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I took it too. Now I am proud to tell you I am feeling fine and have given birth to a boy baby. He is my 'Pinkham' baby. I keep a bottle of Compound in my house always."—Mrs. PETER MARCO, Box 54, North Oxford, Mass.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, weakness, and nervousness are symptoms which indicate a lowered vitality of the female organism, and the tonic, strengthening properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs, contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, are just what is needed by every woman who is in Mrs. Marco's condition.

woman. It seemed as if the high gods were hardly playing fair, to throw a fainting woman on his hands just then, at a time when he was all preoccupied with his own absorbing tragedy.

Even while this thought was running through his mind, he was gathering the slight young body into his arms; and he found it really astonishingly easy to rise and bear her to the bed. Then turning to his hand-bag, he opened it and produced a small, leather-bound flask of brandy; a little of which would go far toward shattering her syncope, he fancied.

It did, in fact; a few drops between her half-parted lips, and she came to with disconcerting rapidity, opening dazed eyes in the middle of a spasm of coughing. He stepped back, stoppering the flask.

"That's better," he said pleasantly. "Now lie still while I fetch you a drink of water."

As he turned to the washstand his foot struck the tumbler she had dropped. He stopped short, frowning down at the great, staring, wet, yellow stain on the dingy and threadbare carpet. Together with this discovery he got a whiff of an acrid-sweet effluvium that spelled "Oxalic Acid—Poison" as unmistakably as did the druggist's label on the empty packet on the washstand.

In another moment he was back at the bedside with a clean glass of water, which he offered to the girl's lips, passing his arm beneath her shoulders and lifting her head so that she might drink.

She emptied the glass thirstily.

"Look here!" he said almost roughly under the [illegible] of [illegible] fear—"you didn't really drink any of that stuff, did you?"

Her eyes met his with a look of negation [illegible] near. Then she turned her head away, dragging a pillow beneath it. He let her down again.

"Good!" he said in [illegible] meant to be encouraging; "you'll be all right in a shot or two."

Her colorless lips moved in a whisper he had to bend close to distinguish.

"Please . . ."

"Yes?"

"Please don't . . . tell anybody . ."

"I won't. Don't worry."

The lids quivered down over her eyes, and her mouth was writhing with anguish. He stared perplexed. He wanted to go away quickly, but couldn't gain his own consent to do so. She was in no condition to be left alone, this delicate and fragile child, defenceless and beset. A strange girl, to find in a plight like hers, he thought: not pretty, but quite unusual; delicate, sensitive, high-strung, bred to the finer things of life—this last was self-evident in the fine simplicity of her severely plain attire.

A variety of impressions crowded upon his perceptions in little more than a glance. For suddenly Nature took her in hand; she twisted upon her side, as if to escape his regard, and covered her face, her palms muffling deep tearing sobs while waves of pent-up misery racked her slender little body.

Whitaker moved softly away. . . .

Once, pausing by the centre-table, he happened to look down. He saw a little heap of the hotel writing-paper, together with envelopes, a pen, a bottle of ink. Three of the envelopes were sealed and superscribed, and two were stamped. The unstamped letter was addressed to the Proprietor of the Commercial house.

Of the others, one was directed to a Mr. C. W. Morton in care of another person at a number on lower Sixth Avenue, New York; and from this Whitaker began to understand the singular manner of his introduction to the wrong room; there's no great difference between Morton and Morten, especially when written carelessly.

But the third letter caused his eyes to widen considerably. It bore the name of Thurlow Ladislas, Esq., and a Wall Street address.

Whitaker's mouth shaped a still-born whistle. He was recalling with surprising distinctness the fragment of dialogue he had overheard at his club the previous afternoon.

CHAPTER III.

Mrs. Whitaker.

He lived through a long, bad quarter hour, his own tensed nerves twanging in sympathy with the girl's sobbing—like telegraph wires singing in a gale—his mind busy with many thoughts, strangely new and compelling, wearing a fresh complexion that lacked altogether the coloring of self-interest.

He mixed a weak draught of brandy and water and returned to the bedside. She made an effort to rise. The effect was quickly apparent in the color that came into her cheeks, faint but warm. After a moment she asked:

"Please—who are you?"

"My name is Whitaker," he said—"Hugh Morten Whitaker. I didn't want to be known, so registered as Hugh Morten. They mistook me for your husband."

The girl swung to her feet.

"I want to tell you something." She faced him bravely, though he refused the challenge of her tormented eyes. "Won't you listen?"

He crossed to a window, where he stood staring out. "I'd rather not," he said softly, "but if you prefer—"

"I do prefer," said the voice behind him. "I—I'm Mary Ladislas."

"Yes," said Whitaker.

"I . . . I ran away from home last week—five days ago—to get married to our chauffeur, Charles Morton . . ."

She stammered.

"Please don't go on, if it hurts," he begged without looking around.

"I've got to. I've got to get it over with. . . . We were at Southampton, at my father's summer home—I mean, that's where I ran away from. He—Charley—drove me over to Greenport and I took the ferry there and came here to wait for him. He went to New York in the car, promising to join me here as soon as possible. . . ."

"And he didn't come," Whitaker wound up for her, when she faltered. "How much money of yours did he take with him?"

There was a brief pause of astonishment. "What do you know about that?" she demanded.

"I know a good deal about that type of man," he said grimly.

"I didn't have any money to speak of, but I had some jewelry—my mother's—and he was to take that and pawn it for money to get married with."

"I see."

The girl in her turn went to one of the windows, standing with her back to the room. Whitaker drew a chair for her and took a seat a little distance away, with a keen glance appraising the change in her condition. She seemed measurably more composed and mistress of her emotions, though he had to judge mostly by her voice and manner, so dark was the room.

"Don't!" she cried sharply. "Please don't look at me so—"

"I beg your pardon. I didn't mean to—"

"It's only—only that you make me think of what you must be thinking about me—"

"You've had a narrow but a wonderfully lucky escape."

"Oh! . . . But I'm not glad . . . I was desperate—"

"I mean," he interrupted coolly, "from Mr. Morton. The silver lining is, you're not married to a blackguard."

"Oh, yes, yes!" she agreed passionately.

"And you have youth, health, years of life before you!"

He sighed inaudibly . . .

"You wouldn't say that, if you understood."

"Have you thought of going home? Have you written to your father—explained?"

"I sent him a special delivery three days ago, and—and yesterday a telegram. I knew it wouldn't do any good, but I . . . I told him everything. He didn't answer. He won't, ever."

She bent forward, elbows on knees, head and shoulders cringing.

"It hurts so!" she wailed . . . "what people will think . . . the shame, the bitter, bitter shame of this! I've earned my punishment."

"Oh, I say—"

"But I have, because—because I didn't love him. I didn't love him at all, and I knew it, even though I meant to marry him. . . ."

"But, why—in Heaven's name?"

"Because I was so lonely and . . . misunderstood and unhappy at home. No mother, never daring to see my sister (she ran away, too) . . . my friendships at school discouraged . . . nothing in life but my father to bully me and make cruel fun of me because I'm not pretty. . . . That's why I ran away with a man I didn't love—because I wanted freedom and a little happiness."

"Good Lord!" he murmured beneath his breath, awed by the pitiful, childish simplicity of her confession and the deep damnation that had waited upon her.

"So it's over!" she cried—"over, and I've learned my lesson, and I'm disgraced forever, and friendless and—"

"Stop right there!" he checked her roughly. "You're not friendless yet, and that nullifies all the rest. Be glad you've had your romance and learned your lesson—"

"Please don't think I'm not grateful for your kindness," she interrupted. "But the disgrace—that can't be blotted out!"

"Oh, yes, it can," he insisted bluntly. "There's a way I know—"

A glimmering of that way had only that instant let a little light in upon the darkness of his solicitous distress for her. He rose and began to walk and think, hands clasped behind him, trying to make what he had in mind seem right and reasonable.

"You mean beg my father to take me back. I'll die first!"

"There mustn't be any more talk, or even any thought, of anything like that. I understand too well to ask the impossible of you. But there is one way out—a perfectly right way—if you're willing and brave enough to take a chance—a long chance."

Somehow she seemed to gain hope of his tone. She sat up, following him with eyes that sought incredulously to believe.

"Have I any choice?" she asked. "I'm desperate enough . . . ."

"God knows," he said, "you'll have to be!"

"Try me."

He paused, standing over her.

"Desperate enough to marry a man who's bound to die within six months and leave you free? I'm that man: the doctors give me six months more of life. Will you take my name to free yourself? Heaven my witness, you're welcome to it."

"Oh," she breathed, aghast, "what are you saying?"

"I'm proposing marriage," he said, with his quaint, one-sided smile.

"Please listen: I came to this place to make a quick end to my troubles—but I've changed my mind about that, now. What's happened in this room has made me see that nobody has any right to—hasten things. But I mean to leave the country immediately and let death find me where it will. I shall leave behind me a name and a little money, neither of any conceivable use to me. Will you take them, employ them to make your life what it was meant to be? It's a little thing, but it will make me feel a lot more fit to go out of this world—to know I've left at least one decent act to mark my memory. There's only this farfetched chance—I may live. It's a million-to-one shot, but you've got to bear it in mind. But really you can't lose—"

"Oh, stop, stop!" she implored him, half hysterical. "To think of marrying to benefit by the death of a man like you—!"

"You've no right to look at it that way." He had a wry, secret smile for his specious sophistry. "You're being asked to confer, not to accept, a favor. It's just an act of kindness to a hopeless man. I'd go mad if I didn't know you were safe from a recurrence of the folly of this afternoon."

"Don't!" she cried—"don't tempt me. You've no right. . . . You don't know how frantic I am. . . ."

"I do," he countered frankly. "I'm depending on just that to swing you to my point of view. You've got to come to it. I mean you shall marry me."

She stared up at him, spellbound, insensibly yielding to the domination of his will. It was inevitable. He was scarcely less desperate than she—and no less overwrought and unstrung; and he was the stronger; in the natural course of things his will could not but prevail.

"It's a Bargain."

The last trace of evening light had faded out of the world before they were agreed. Darkness wrapped them in its folds; they were but as voices warring in a black and boundless void.

Whitaker struck a match and applied it to the solitary gas-jet. A thin blue, sputtering tongue of flame revealed them to one another. The girl still crouched in her armchair, weary and spent, her powers of contention all vitiated by the losing struggle. Whitaker was trembling with nervous fatigue.

"Well?" he demanded.

"Oh, have your own way," she said drearily. "If it must be . . . ."

"It's for the best," he insisted obstinately. "You'll never regret it."

"One of us will—either you or I," she said quietly. "It's too one-sided. You want to give all and ask nothing in return. It's a fool's bargain."

He hesitated, stammering with surprise. She had a habit of saying the unexpected. "A fool's bargain"—the wisdom of the sage from the lips of a child. . . .

"Then it's settled," he said, businesslike, offering his hand. "Fool's bargain or not—it's a bargain."

She rose unassisted, then trusted her slender fingers to his palm. She said nothing. The steady gaze of her extraordinary eyes abashed him.

They left the hotel together. Whitaker got his change of a hundred dollars at the desk. "Mrs. Morton's" bill, of course, included with his—and bribed the bell-boy to take the suitcase to the railway station and leave it there, together with his own hand-bag. Since he had unaccountably conceived a determination to continue living for a time, he meant to seek out more pleasant accommodations for the night.

The rain had ceased, leaving a ragged sky of clouds and stars in patches. The air was warm and heavy with wetness. Sidewalks glistened like black watered silk; street lights mirrored themselves in fugitive puddles in the roadways; limbs of trees overhanging the sidewalks shivered now and again in a half-hearted breeze, pelting the wayfarers with miniature showers of lukewarm, scented drops.

Whitaker, taking his heart and his fate in his hands, accosted a venerable gentleman whom they encountered as he was on the point of turning off the sidewalk to private grounds.

"I beg your pardon," he began.

The man paused and turned upon them a saintly countenance framed in hair like snow.

"There is something I can do for you?" he inquired with punctilious courtesy.

"If you will be kind enough to direct me to a minister . . . ."

"I am one."

"I thought so," said Whitaker. "We wish to get married."

The gentleman looked from his face to the girl's, then moved aside from the gate. "This is my home," he explained. "Will you be good enough to come in?"

Conducting them to his private study, he subjected them to a kindly catechism. The girl said little, Whitaker taking upon himself the brunt of the examination. Absolutely straightforward and intensely sincere, he came through the ordeal well, without being obliged to disclose what he preferred to keep secret. The minister, satisfied, at length called in the town clerk by telephone; who issued the license, pocketed his fee, and in company with the minister's wife, acted as witness. . . .

Whitaker found himself on his feet beside Mary Ladislas. They were being married. He seemed to hear the droning of the loom of the Fates. . . .

And they were man and wife. The door had closed, the gate-latch clicked behind them. They were walking quietly side by side through the scented night, they whom God had joined together. Neither found anything to say. At the station, Whitaker bought his wife a ticket to New York and secured for her solitary use a drawing-room in the sleeper. Whitaker possessed himself of his wife's hand-bag long enough to furnish it with a sum of money and an old envelope bearing the name and address of his law partner. He explained that Drummond would issue her an adequate monthly allowance and advise her when she should have become her own mistress once more; in a word, a widow.

She thanked him briefly, quietly, with a constraint he understood too well to resent.

Both, perhaps, were sensible of some relief when at length the train thundered in from the East, breathing smoke and flame. Whitaker helped his wife aboard and interviewed the porter in her behalf. Then they had a moment or two alone in the drawing-room, in what was meant to be their first and last parting.

She caught him suddenly by the shoulders with both her hands. Her eyes sought his with a wistful courage he could not but admire.

"You know I'm grateful . . . ."

"Don't think of it that way—though I'm glad you are."

"You're a good man," she said brokenly.

He knew himself too well to be able to reply.

"You mustn't worry about me, now. You've made things easy for me. I can take care of myself, and . . . I shan't forget whose name I bear."

He muttered something to the effect that he was sure of that.

She released his shoulders and stood back, searching his face with tormented eyes. Abruptly she offered him her hand.

"Good-by," she said, her lips quivering—"Good-by, good friend!"

He caught the hand, wrung it clumsily and painfully and . . . realized that the train was in motion. He had barely time to get away . . .

He found himself on the station platform, stupidly watching the rear lights dwindle down the tracks and wondering whether or not hallucinations were a phase of his malady. A sick man often dreams strange dreams. . . .

A voice behind him, cool with a trace of irony, observed:

Regarding the Teeth.

The teeth serve varied purposes. The four front teeth, or incisors, are chisel-shaped in order that they may cut or bite. This shape is also helpful in enunciation. The "eye" teeth, behind the incisors, are better fitted for heavier cutting or biting than the front ones. They are a transition form between the incisors and the larger teeth, which stand next and which break the food into small bits before it is ground and pulverized by the solid back teeth.

Pepsinco

Not a Question of Merit that's proven

The Question is—

Do you need it?

A positive remedy for all stomach ills, whether acute or chronic,

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST

For a Quarter Package of Pepsinco

Greatest enemies of your TEETH

—are Pyorrhea and decay.

Both usually develop only in the mouth where germ-laden tartar is present.

"But I brush my teeth," you say. Yes, you brush them, but do you REALLY CLEAN them?

Tonight, after brushing your teeth, go to the mirror and examine them. In all probability you will find an accumulation of tartar on the enamel and bits of food deposit hiding in the crevices.

Senreco, the formula of a dental specialist, REALLY CLEANS. It embodies specially prepared, soluble granules unusually effective in cleaning away food deposits. Moreover, it is particularly destructive to the germ of Pyorrhea.

Go to your dealer today and get a tube of Senreco—keep your teeth REALLY CLEAN and protect yourself against Pyorrhea and decay.

Send 4c to Senreco, 304 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, for trial package.

An Effect of A Cyclone

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I walked into Topeka, Kan., one morning and was entering a hotel when a man in the doorway looked at me with a growing expression of astonishment on his face. I could not understand why he regarded me thus, for I did not remember to have ever seen him before. I passed into the hotel. Persons were moving about, none of whom interested me or I them, till I ran up against another man, who looked at me with the same expression as the man I had met in the doorway. As he passed me I turned and looked back at him and saw him looking back at me.

Not ten minutes after this a hand was clapped on my shoulder, and a voice said:

"Jim Donegan, I want you!"

This third surprise was a clew to the others. Quite likely I resembled a man who was wanted for crime or perhaps suspected crime. I certainly never broke a law in my life.

True enough, both the men who had looked at me in surprise swore that I was Jim Donegan, who a few days before was caught red handed in a robbery, but got away. The only thing about my case that seemed to puzzle my accusers was that I should openly show myself in Topeka. But when I denied that I was Donegan they concluded that I was bluffing.

While I was being taken to jail one of those Kansas cyclones came up and cut a swath right through the town, taking in me and my captor. What became of him I don't know to this day. As for me, I was blown against a tree box and clung to it till the storm had passed, which involved only a few minutes. What especially interested me was to make good my escape from those who had mistaken me for some one else. I was fearful lest my captor would get his hands on me again. Perhaps, considering the damage that had been done by the storm, I magnified my own importance. Nevertheless I thought of nothing but re-arrest.

Holding to the path of the cyclone, I ran like a deer till I came to a house with a hole in its side so big that I could walk right through it. There was a bed inside that looked very inviting for a tired man. I was not tired, but it occurred to me that it would be a good place to hide. So I jumped into bed and covered up, all except my eyes, resolving that I would pretend to have been killed by the cyclone.

I had not been in bed long before a pretty girl came in and, seeing me, ran out crying:

"Who in the world was in bed in the spare room when the storm came?"

A woman, a young fellow about seventeen years old and a little girl came into the room. I lay staring at the ceiling, pretending to be dead. It seemed to me that this was the only way to avoid answering questions as to how I came to be in bed in a strange house.

"He's not dead," said the girl who had discovered me. "Don't you see the color in his cheek?" I concluded that it would be better to play injured. I groaned and lowered my eyes to the group bending over me.

"Where am I?" I asked.

"How in the world did you come to be here?" exclaimed the woman in a tone of amazement.

"Don't you remember anything?" asked the girl.

"I remember being taken up by a wind and landed somewhere, but when I stopped I lost consciousness." Then looking in assumed wonder at the open side of the house, "Can it be that I was blown through there?"

I asked them if they couldn't cover up the opening and let me stay there till I felt able to go somewhere else. They got blankets and tacked them up between me and the outside. Then they asked me what else they could do for me. I told them that I would prefer to be let alone for a time till I could collect my faculties, declaring that I felt bruised all over. They suggested that some bones might be broken, but as this would involve an immediate examination I said my bones were all right. The girl said that though she could understand how I might have been blown in at the aperture she couldn't understand how I could have been blown into bed and covered up. I said that just before they had come in I had felt a sensation of cold and had doubtless pulled the covers over me.

"Do you remember tucking yourself in?" asked the young lady.

I paid no attention to what was plainly a sarcasm. I was well tucked in, for I had got under the covers without throwing them down.

Well, I played "safe" long enough to send for my brother, dreading all the while that the house would be searched for me. Had I seen the damage that had been done I would not have feared so much for myself. A strip of the town several hundred feet wide had been wrecked and many persons injured. The house I was in had been badly damaged, though no one was hurt.

I left with my brother after dark and didn't visit Topeka again till I had ample proofs of my identity. Then I went to see the girl who asked me if the storm that had landed me in bed had "tucked me in." I told her the whole story and asked her if she had believed my explanation. She said she hadn't, but thought I had been so badly frightened by the cyclone that I had got into bed without knowing what I was doing.

First Despair Deeply Felt.

There is no despair so absolute as that which comes with the first moments of our first great sorrow, when we have not yet known what it is to have suffered and be healed, to have despaired and to have recovered hope. —George Eliot.

It Might Be Tried.

Sonny, six, is very much averse to anything that is "sissified." One day while watching me dress his younger brother in a much befrilled little suit, he suddenly blurted out: "Mamma, it's a wonder you wouldn't put a corset on Archie."

Wanted Things Cleared Up.

Colored pastor (dismissing congregation)—"De membahs what am pervided wid umbrellas will please wait until I take a look at 'em. Since de mysterious disappearance of my own umbrella last Sunday dar am a cloud ob suspicion floating ober dis yer church which has got to be dispelled."

Laughable Mistake.

A very popular preacher once had a brother so much like him that few people knew one from the other. One day he went to see his aged parents and, the occasion being some family festival, he expected his brother to be there likewise. On entering the room he stepped forward to greet his brother with all the heartiness which a long separation engendered, and found from a mirror at the other end of the room, that he was offering his hand to himself!

Florence Nightingale's Gift.

On her return from the Crimea Florence Nightingale was given $250,000, which she devoted to founding the Nightingale Home for Training Nurses.

Feared Lightning Rods.

Lightning rods, when erected in early days, were in frequent instances torn down by angry mobs, which suspected them to be accountable for failures of crops, earthquakes and other manifestations of divine displeasure. The first recognition accorded them by any government was by the senate of Venice, which, May 9, 1778, ordered their adoption for the protection of all public buildings throughout the republic.

Doc's Little Mistake.

"Nothing the matter with you at all. You are in perfect health. Why, your pulse is as steady as clockwork!" "But doctor, you have got your fingers on my wrist watch!"

Officials are closely studying plans for retaliation against England since they have learned they can expect no relief except that obtained by force, employed in a commercial way.

No False Hopes.

The British reply to Acting Secretary of State Polk's note, written weeks ago, is expected here not later than the middle of next week. Neutrals have been informed that they should not entertain false hopes that the wishes of this government will be complied with. They are, therefore, ready to employ every means available for bringing England to a point where she shall have to yield to the American ideas of fairness.

The British government will be informed of the powers of retaliation recently placed by congress in the president's hands. Unless Great Britain answers satisfactorily, much more quickly than it took her to agree on an unsatisfactory reply to the first boycott note, every British ship will be in danger of being held up in American harbors and clearances refused.

Keeping Yourself Well

DRIVING OUT CATARRH

If people knew how the presence of catarrh is a constant menace, they would have none of it. It infests some part of the delicately adjusted body and makes it useless, thus throwing on the other organs more than their share of work. It affords a carefully prepared seed-bed for the germs of colds, grip, tuberculosis and pneumonia. It so disarranges Nature's delicate plans as to make possible asthma, hay fever and other respiratory disorders. It spreads until it becomes systemic, thus involving many organs and debilitating the entire system with serious results.

Catarrh is easily neglected, and it rarely gets well of itself. It needs proper medicinal correction. For almost half a century many thousands have found help in Peruna, a valuable tonic with special efficacy in catarrhal conditions. The aim is to clean out waste matter, to dispel the catarrhal inflammation, and tone up the whole system. Its users willingly testify that it has done all this and even more for catarrhal sufferers. What it has done is the best proof of what it will do. You may rely on Peruna.

In tablet form it is pleasant to take and easy to administer.

THE BIG BUSY STORE

Two Crops Are Short

WASHINGTON, D. C., SEPT. 9.—The department of agriculture estimates this year's Ohio corn crop will be nearly 27,000,000 bushels short of last year's crop. The Ohio crop is estimated at 120,221,000 bushels, as against 1[illegible],010,000 bushels last year and a 10-year average of 151,691,000 bushels. In percentages the crop is rated at 68 this year against a 10-year average of 83.

The Ohio potato crop also is far short of average, being rated at 53, against a 10-year average of 73. It is estimated that Ohio will raise 9,510,000 bushels of potatoes this year, against 12,516,000 last year.

Fail To Park Cars Properly

Complaints having been made that autoists are becoming negligent, Mayor H. L. Richardson called attention Saturday to the rules governing the parking of cars. On Main street, between Second and Seventh, and on Third street, from the T. W. V. & O. railroad to Mulberry, autoists may turn off the front lights on their cars if they park them at an angle of 45 degrees; on all other streets the cars must be parked parallel with the curb and the lights must be on.

Quarantine Is Blamed For Baby's Death

DOVER, SEPT. 9.—Mrs. J. W. Sharp, until last Wednesday a resident of this city, started action in Pittsburg Saturday morning, claiming that the Pennsylvania quarantine law was responsible for the death of her eight-weeks old baby. Mrs. Sharp and husband and several children left Dennison on the Panhandle and while enroute were stopped by Pennsylvania state officials. While at one of these stations her baby took sick and died.

located him and after a brief woodshed conference, drove all desire for circus life out of the young man's head. But his ambition is realized now, and he will be seen in the Jesse L. Lasky production of the thrilling photodrama, "THE CLOWN," written especially for him by Marian Fairfax and produced for the Paramount program under the personal direction of William C. DeMille. This story of the sawdust circle is said to be superior to even his immortal "Chimmie Fadden" pictures. The Lasky company has surrounded him with a cast of unusual excellence, including Thomas Meighan, Florence Dagmar, Ernest Joy, Little Billy Jacobs, Gerald Ward and others.

TUESDAY—TRIANGLE

Tuesday the Triangle service features the popular Douglas Fairbanks in "Flirting with Fate" a real love story with one of the prettiest weddings ever done into a picture. But it ought to be a winner on several other counts as well. It is a laugh storm, with a wealth of novel acrobatic achievements for the athletic star that proves Fairbanks the most agile young person in pictures. In addition for Tuesday Fay Tincher will be featured in the Keystone comedy "Laundry Liz."

WEDNESDAY—TRIANGLE

Charles Ray will be featured at the Mystic Wednesday in a fine Triangle drama "The Deserter" a dramatic story laid in and around a western frontier army post in 1840. A troop of cavalry is stationed there and the [illegible] wandering loose in the surrounding region. Also there is a tough [illegible] western mining settlement [illegible] there are [illegible]. Edna Stewart Is Summoned

Funeral services for Edna May Stewart, 15, colored, of Bank street, will be held at the late home Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with Rev. D. C. Boyd in charge. Interment will be made in South Lawn cemetery.

Miss Stewart died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stewart, Saturday morning shortly before six o'clock. Death was due to meningitis from which has had suffered but a few days. Last Monday she returned to her home from Cleveland where she had been visiting relatives. She was taken to her bed shortly after her return and grew steadily worse.

Besides the parents she is survived by a sister, Margaret, aged 16, and a brother, Wilbur, aged 9.

WHEN WHEAT FOLLOWS CORN

In putting corn ground to wheat it is well to remember that the supply of available plant food in the soil has been largely depleted. The practice of applying two or two hundred and fifty pounds of acid phosphate to the acre is to be recommended especial[ly] where no manure is available.

The phosphate fertilizer will help give the wheat crop a start in the fall that will not only enable it to get a stronger growth that will tend to prevent winter killing, but this more vigorous growth will [illegible] enable the [illegible] to resist the attacks of the Hessian fly. — Farm Life.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Gallagher, Miss Mayme Custer and Miss Margaret Gallagher, will motor to Dresden Sunday, where they will visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Schelberger.

Stamp Tax No Longer Effective

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 9. When the new general revenue bill became effective today business men thruout the country were relieved of the stamp tax which they have been paying since December 1, 1914, and which were to have continued until December 31 of this year.

The general revenue bill repealed the emergency revenue bill stamp taxes and the internal revenue bureau has ruled that revenue stamps are not required after today.

The stamp taxes repealed include those paid on telegraph and telephone messages, parlor car seats and berth tickets, bonds, debentures, certificates of indebtedness, certificates of stocks, transfers, bill of sale, promissory notes, express and freight manifests, and bills of lading, bonding instruments, conveyances, insurance policies, entry of goods, passage tickets, power of attorney, protests, perfumery, cosmetics and chewing gum.

During the first seven months' operation of the emergency revenue law the stamp taxes yielded more than $22,000,000. These taxes are recorded collectively and not under individual heads.
